Twelve Thousand Deliberately Drowned In Amur River and Thousands Killed by Shot.

London, Nov. 13.—The Globe this afternoon publishes a letter from a Belgian gentleman who has been traveling to Pekin via the Trans-Siberian railroad. He describes, under date of September 6, what he saw in the Amur river. His account surpasses in horror those previously published.

"The scenes I have witnessed during the three days since the steamer left Blagovetchensk," he says, "are horrible beyond the power of description. It is the closing tableau of a fearful human tragedy. Two thousand were deliberately drowned at Morox, two thousand at Rabe and eight thousand around Blagovetchensk, a total of 12,000 corpses encumbering
the river, among which were thousands of women and children. Navigation was all but impossible.
Last week a boat had to plow her way through a tangled and mangled mass of corpses lashed together by their long hair. The banks were literally covered with corpses. In the curves of the stream were dark, putrid, smelling masses of human flesh and bone, surging and swaying in the steamer's wake and wash. The captain vainly ordered full speed ahead.
The sight and smell will be ever with us.

"From Blagovetchensk to Algoun, forty-five kilometers, numerous villages studied the bank, with a thriving, industrious population of over 100,000. That of Algoun was 20,000. No one will ever know the number of those who perished by Russian shot, sword and stream.
Not a village is left. The silence of death was around us, the smoking ruins of Algoun on the right, with broken-down, crumbling walls and shattered, roofless houses."

Grand Jury.

Bowling Green, Ky., Nov. 14.—
Circuit Judge Settle this morning refused to issue a mandamus brought by Republicans to compel the canvassing board to count 112 unsigned ballots cast in one of the precincts. His opinion is a very elaborate one.

The Republicans will file a new mandamus suit in another precinct based on new lines. The same steps may be taken in still two other precincts of this city in which unsigned ballots were not counted.

A number of Smith's Grove people are here to-day before the grand jury for the purpose of indicting twelve negroes who voted at the recent election. It is charged the negroes are all under twenty-one years of age and made affidavits that they were qualified voters.

DISEASES OF WILD BEASTS.

Consumption and Pneumonia Common—Snakes Die of Cancer.

"What diseases are wild beasts in captivity subject to?" was the question a writer for the Washington Star put to a leading animal tamer.

"Well," was the reply, "monkeys for the most part die of consumption and pneumonia. Antelopes, moose, deer and other browsing beasts because proper food cannot be found for them. In my opinion, the tannin in the bark and twigs which these animals feed most largely upon is what their systems need in order to keep them in a healthy condition. Of course, very little of this is found in the hay and other foods which are fed to these animals in captivity. In regard to the far-western animals of this country there seems to be some peculiar quality of the alfalfa and other grasses of the prairie which is absolutely necessary for their sustenance and well being. I think that the climatic change has very little influence upon them. I have shipped lots of mule deer, black-tailed deer, antelope and Rocky mountain sheep to Europe and the continent, but they did not live one year. You see that moose, to instance, live largely upon lichen and bark. Of course, these foods cannot be secured so far from the forests, and hay proves to be a very poor substitute. I have no doubt but that these animals could be supplied with their natural food if they were to live as long as human beings.

"All the African, Indian and Australian animals come to this country through a general depot in Germany. If any weakly specimens arrive at this country they are kept there until they recover. While in transit across the ocean it is a very common thing for non-ferocious to go without food for ten days, and they are often sick. This is particularly true of llamas, antelopes and camels. There is a good deal of ignorance about the medical treatment of wild animals. Those which feed upon grass are treated in sickness much the same as a horse. In the case of lions, tigers and beasts of the cat family generally the same medicines which are given to a dog under similar circumstances are used.

"One of the most difficult of species to keep alive is the South American tapir. They are brought chiefly from the Amazon river and belong to the pig family. Like the monkeys, they all die of consumption. Snakes, as a rule, die of cancer. I have often found them from the mouth of a python pieces of dead rat tissue as large as a walnut. This disease is produced by the habit of the snakes sticking their fangs in to wood or any hard substance with which they come in contact. The fangs are usually broken off in three or four days and the snake dies. As soon as the tissue is removed, the cancerous growth in the mouth of a snake I know that the reptile is doomed.

"I remember a magnificent Bengal tiger, which went mad from convulsions brought on by eating too much, and in a frenzy the tiger ate off her own tail close up to the body, and devoured every inch of it, including the hair.

"About three years ago I lost three rare Koodoo antelopes in a very curious manner. They were confined in a stable which was infested with rats. Last one night I heard a great hubbub in the stable. Opening the door I found the antelopes springing all over the stable, striking their hooves against the floor and ceiling and acting as if they were frightened out of their wits. I noticed that they looked at a particular corner, and when I saw a rat come out the effect was magical upon the antelopes. I tried in vain to quiet them, and the next morning they were found dead in the stable. They had died from fright."

No Danger of Overcrowding.

Mr. M. G. Mulhall says there is no reason to fear overcrowding on this globe for centuries. The area of the United States, excluding Alaska, is just 3,600,000 square miles, the average density of the New England States is 17 inhabitants to the square mile, so that it may be said that the union could easily support 210,000,000; or three times its present population. Meantime other vast fields are opening to invite immigrants. Canada, Brazil, Spanish America and Australia are each of them larger than the United States. Each of them could find room for 200,000,000 settlers.

Municipal Banking.

For some time the corporation of Glasgow has taken comparatively small sums of money on deposit and the experiment has worked well. Emboldened by this success the progressive element of the city council proposed that banking should be added to the municipal undertakings.

MODERN PRINCES.

Prey on American Merchant Vessel in the Far East.

In the track of multiplying American commerce with the far east—their boldness growing with the number of ships that pass, and holding the doorway from the Atlantic to the Pacific—the pirate tribe as treacherous and cruel as the worst of the rovers who sailed the Spanish main.

Worse, indeed, they are than the Malay marauders of oriental seas. They find their shield in darkness, yet fire is their most potent weapon.

Mariners who have shunned the wild waters that meet at Cape Horn and sought a more peaceful passage from ocean to ocean through the Straits of Magellan for more than a year have been bringing to San Francisco wild tales of savage out-throats and robbers. More like the yambs of the foretaste than narratives of truth they have sounded, says the San Francisco Examiner.

Dark brown men with matted hair and armed with huge spears and knives; lights that flitted about in dark caves and on the face of the waters like the will-o'-the-wisp in the bog, have been the visions that vigilant lookouts have reported. Men disappearing from decks where they had been set to watch, and with them all that could attract savage eye, have been phenomenal of peaceful nights in the still waters under the shadow of the mountains that line the straits.

Schooners and ships have disappeared of late years after leaving Sunda Point in the straits, and after having been at anchor further along under the hills, and partly burned hulks have been reported to indicate how they have met their fate.

Even big steamships have narrowly escaped similar fates, for burning brands have been thrown into port-holes while the crews were asleep, and when the men have rushed to fight the flames on another part of the ship wild men of the woods have appeared and attacked them from behind, and, besides loss of property, left death and wounds as reminders.

"Dynamite Johnny" O'Brien, pilot of a score of daring filibustering expeditions in the days when the Cubans were receiving arms from the United States wherewith to continue their fight against Spain, learned to respect the terrors of the straits a few years ago.

One dark night, when the lookout was vigilant, he saw lights glimmer all about the ship, but far away.

He could detect nothing in the water alongside, but suddenly a burning brand was thrown on the deck, and it was found that another had been thrown into a port-hole. Fire started in both places, and while one part of the crew was engaged in fighting the flames the other had its energies fully employed in beating off a score of invaders who were hurrying to the side of the ship in craft whose progress could be traced by the lights they bore.

GROWS IN SEALED FLASK.

A Cactus in the Botanical Garden at Berlin.

In the botanical gardens of Berlin is to be seen a cactus which has grown for seven years in a glass flask sealed by fusion; it was presented by a German pharmacist, Ludwig Runt. He explains the growth of the plant by the fact that the soil in which it grows contains a certain quantity of spores of fungi, which germinate from time to time and cover the sides of the flask with a greenish layer. These, in dying, furnish the carbonic acid necessary for the life of the cactus. This explanation appeared satisfactory at first, but it was then asked from whence came the carbonic acid for the fungi; again, the phenomena of nutrition which take place in the green parts of the plant require an excess of carbonic acid. This seems, in fact, to be furnished by the process of putrefaction which takes place in the soil. Another question which is more difficult to answer is the origin of the water which is necessary to maintain the life of the plant; this may be derived from the decomposition of the cellulose. However these questions may be answered, the fact remains that the plant lives and develops in a hermetically closed medium. The experiment is not difficult to carry out, and its study may lead to interesting results.—Scientific American.

LI COULD WALK.

Incident of the Distinguished Chinaman's Visit to This Country.

When Li Hung Chang made his visit to the United States several years ago he was jarred in a number of ways by finding that our ideas were not altogether in accord with his. But, being a sensible man, he tried to accommodate himself to the ways of western barbarism.

In New York a round of visits was arranged to the officials, the homes of a few leading citizens, and to points of interest. At each place a squad of policemen was stationed in advance to keep in order the crowd that was bound to gather.

Getting out of his carriage at the city hall, Li stepped to the foot of the stairs leading to the mayor's office and stood there till two servants, who had followed in another carriage, ran up with a queer chair—not unlike, in a general way, the old-time Sedan chairs, except that it was without a top. In this chair Li calmly seated himself. "Does he expect the mayor to come down to see him?" was the query that went from lip to lip, with such remarks as: "See the style of him!"

Imperceptibly Li sat till a police captain stepped to the chair, where upon the oriental secretary, who stood beside his master, explained that, according to Chinese etiquette, so great a dignitary as Li Hung Chang could not walk upstairs, but must be carried.

Politeness to a visitor operated to make the officer call four sturdy policemen, who took hold of the handles and had the celestial at the top of the steps in a jiffy.

They were so taken by surprise that they had seized the handles without reflection, but even before they were at the top of the steps they were so angry that they almost dropped the yellow-faced visitor, regardless of consequences.

And the news spread like wildfire among the thousands of men who make up the police force for New York. Were policemen expected to be body-servants of a Chinaman? The unfortunate captain was made to feel that he was forever disgraced. The heinousness of it all, says the Saturday Evening Post, will be better understood when it is remembered that the great majority of the police force are Irishmen. They boiled with wrath at the indignity.

Let the Chinaman hire somebody to carry him if he couldn't walk! Let him send into New York's Chinatown for Chinese chair-bearers.

Untold wealth would not have tempted another New York policeman to put a hand to Li's chair, even if ordered to do so by the chief of the department and the entire police board.

In some inscrutable way Li learned all of this. He didn't say anything. His countenance was as calmly unperturbed as ever.

But when, the next day, his carriage drove up at the home of Gen. (then Col.) Frederick D. Grant, the son of old Li's friend, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, Li stepped from his carriage, glanced with impassive face at the group of belligerent-minded policemen, and skipped up the half-dozen steps to the door like an agile boy.

IT NEVER FREEZES.

Peculiar Properties of a Stream in Southern Oregon.

There is a stream in southern Oregon called Klamath Fort creek, that never freezes even in the coldest weather. George H. Willson, local forest official of the United States weather bureau, is authority for this statement.

Klamath Fort creek is neither wide nor long. Its headwaters push out from the huge bowlders back of the fort. It runs through the valley and empties into another insignificant stream. In winter, no matter how hard the ground is, there is never a sign of ice in its water.

The theory advanced by Mr. Willson to account for this phenomenon is peculiar. The soil of that section of Oregon is of volcanic origin. Twenty-five miles away is a crater lake 2,000 feet above sea level. An extinct crater rises out of the center of this lake to a height of 1,000 feet. The country round is covered with ashes to the depth of several inches. Pumice stone and other permeable matter compose the upper strata, and the water circulates freely through this layer.

Combined with the current of the stream, which is not alone sufficient to counteract the natural law, this free circulation of the water through the top soil stops effectively the freezing of the water and makes this little creek one of the unique things on the Pacific coast.—N. Y. World.

THE BEST PRESCRIPTION IS Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic.

The formula is plainly printed on every bottle—hence you know just what you are taking when you take Grove's. Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called Tasteless Chill Tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. Grove's is the only Chill Cure sold throughout the entire material section of the United States. In Every City, Every Town, Every Village.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

Many Very Singular Formations Discovered by Geologists and Others. Among discoveries made by geologists and others are many singular natural curiosities. Without mentioning the greatest and best known of these natural formations, a brief description of some of the smaller but not less interesting ones may be of interest.

The territory of Colorado is full of wonderful red sandstone rocks. They are lined and grooved all over with fine dots and worn into innumerable grotesque shapes. As an eloquent writer has said: "From the tiny stone which you can hold in your hand to the colossal wall hundreds of feet high, which no man can climb, there is not an inch which does not look as if for millions of years it had been worked by tools. Yet no hand, no tool has been there. Grains of sand have done it all—grains of sand blowing and eddying in wind currents. Slowly, steadily, irreparably the solid rock has been fretted away, distorted, by things almost too small to see."

Such, says Charles F. Adams, in Golden Days, is the origin of the wonderful rock formation of Colorado, while in other localities the action of water has had much to do with such formations.

A museum at Oxford contains one of the strangest stones ever discovered. It is composed of carbonate of lime, and was taken from a colliery drain.

When the miners were at work, the water running through the drain left a deposit colored black by coal dust, but when they were not at work the water ran down clear and left a white deposit. In time these black and white layers made a stone of considerable thickness, which constitutes quite a calendar.

Each day of work has left a black streak, and is followed by a white streak for the night. Wide white streaks mark the Sundays and other holidays, from which circumstance this curious stone is called "The Sunday stone."

An equally remarkable product of nature is described by a California paper as nothing less than a genuine mineral soap. This stone is particularly colored, like castile soap, and is found in an almost inaccessible part of the coast, in the neighborhood of slate-stone and sandstone. The peculiar properties of this stone were discovered by a miner, who noticed when pieces of the stone fell into the stream, which was in proximity to the mine, they soon melted away.

He thereupon set about making experiments, and found that the stone could be used for all the purposes for which manufactured soaps are applicable.

Among freaks of nature, few are more wonderful than the rock which was found on the Cartholton roof some years ago, and was for a time placed on exhibition at the mining register's office at Sandhurst.

This remarkable curiosity was a piece of slate rock, scarcely eight inches square, but upon which nature's hand alone had depicted a landscape scene as would do credit to the brush of a true artist.

The foreground represented a grass plot, in the center of which were two small ponds, out of one of which the water appeared to flow in a small stream toward a patch of rocks. A little distance beyond the ponds was a farmhouse, at the rear and sides of which was seen a row of tall poplar trees. Light, stratified clouds, with a dash of blue sky, completed the picture.

The perspective was almost perfect, and the lights and shadows remarkably well brought out. This was particularly seen in the cluster of rocks, which were very skillfully drawn.

The explanation given of the formation of this pretty rural scene was that on the rock being broken up, it split in such a way as to leave the face on which the picture is represented convex. The various shades, tints and figures were evidently formed by the action of water containing iron, which trickled between the seams of the rock.

The following curious instance of what may be called "accidental art," although not exactly a freak of nature, so nearly parallels the foregoing as to bear mention in this connection.

This peculiar painting was executed, not upon stone, but upon the wooden partitions of a drawer, in which for a quarter of a century a carpenter of Belfast, Me., had kept his tools.

The constant scratching of the various sharp-pointed implements which for 25 years had rattled around which, mingled with the rust, turned green, and the dust and grime, all combined to paint on the pine board partitions a wonderfully correct sketch, in dull colors, of the ocean, with three vessels sailing on its bosom, and in the distance a headland with a lighthouse.

Mr. Hervey, the owner of this curious painting, had it handsomely framed and hung over his repairing bench, where it attracted much attention from his numerous visitors.

FLOWER SPIDERS.

Lazy and Luxurious Life of a Species That Weaves No Webs.

The flower spider of Virginia is not a weaver of webs, but a regular sylvanite, loving ease and luxury. He selects a flower full of sweetness and beauty for his home. There he nestles among the petals, with his lobster-like legs extended to catch insect invaders. And so cunningly does he disguise his body, that he seems a part of the flower, its delicate shades of cream and green color completing the deception.

His kingdom is constantly invaded by swarming robbers; therefore he neither waits nor exerts himself, for his game comes to his hands, and, with the relish of an epicure, he feasts upon the best.

The only exertion he ever makes is to drag the remains of his victims to the top of his castle; and, dropping them to the ground, he gazes complacently down upon his catenated winged mummies, then glides back to his retreat, to be reworked to slay by the summer winds.

Too indolent to be aggressive, says the Golden Days, he avoids danger by a slow, backward movement until hidden from view.

Socially, he is selfish and exclusive, abiding alone in his exquisite home, the even turn of his way never disturbed except by the buzzing of a bee. Then he instantly drops beneath the nectary—that part of a flower containing the honey—where from his keen eyes watch with wondering surprise the operations of the bee, as he extracts the coveted sweets. When the rich stores of his present dwelling have all been collected by the busy bee, then the spider quickly forsakes his lovely abode, on a single line of web, to one never and perhaps more beautiful.

In this way he migrates from flower to flower until summer and autumn are ended. It is then he works for the first time in his lazy existence, making a winter house, like the cocoon of a silkworm, soft and white as down, wherein he lies safe and warm, until his flower houses bloom in the spring. This little spider is the mystery of the fly trap or catchfly, classed by botanists with sensitive plants, as it is supposed to close upon insects that enter its cup, whereas it only closes to protect its honey from rain and dew.

This flower grows in the open ground in clusters, and it is heavily freighted with honey, the attraction which draws so many flies within its fatal calyx, for those who never come out again. The little honey-guard, concealed but watchful, kills them indiscriminately. The flytrap is among the first of "the beautiful sisterhood" to unfold its leaves to the warm rays of the rising sun. At that time, a close observer can see within its heart, like a small pearl in a setting of garnet, the little dew-dealer enjoying his morning repose in the most innocent manner imaginable.

LI HUNG CHANG.

The Cool Old Viceroy at Nicholas II.'s Coronation Fete

Few monarchs possess the "savage" characteristics of Li Hung Chang. At home and abroad he is bound to reign supreme, and this ambition would have more than once gone sadly against him at Peking had he not been the famous Ts'ao's favorite.

In 1896 the old viceroy represented China at Nicholas II.'s coronation fete, when, among other celebrations, an elaborate presentation of grand opera was given. On this evening all the clits of Europe formed the audience. When Nicholas II. entered the orchestra struck the "Rage Tsao Kwei," or Chinese national anthem, everybody stood up during the singing of the hymn, and the last note was drowned by an enthusiastic cheer for the new sovereign. General attention was directed, however, to one box where a wizened-faced old chap was observed seated. This was none other than the independent Li. The master of ceremonies spotted the delinquent, and, rushing up to the Chinaman, politely informed him that he must rise, as had everyone else. "I am no one," answered Li, coldly, "so please take yourself off!"—Chicago

GOOD WALKERS.

William and Mary Howitt Loved to Go on Pedestrian Tours.

It is said that the best footmates of the nineteenth century were William and Mary Howitt, the writers of so many charming bits of literature. They began to walk on their wedding-day, and kept on walking during 60 years of married life.

In 1824, when walking was far more fashionable, says the Youth's Companion, this sturdy Quaker pair walked 500 miles among the Scotch mountains, carrying luggage on their strong young backs. They climbed Ben Lomond, waded streams, crawled over bogs, scrambled through bracken and slid down sheer cliffs in the course of this wild tramp. Doubtless the peasants fanned they were mad.

In the fifty-first year of their married life, when Mrs. Howitt was over 70 and her husband almost 80, they started out one summer morning to climb an alp of the Tyrol. From the village of Taufers they climbed a road too steep for vehicles, walking steadily for five hours.

At dusk they came to a farmer's chalet; there they were cordially invited to supper, and there for two nights they slept on the sweet, fresh hay in the barn, and employed the days in twice climbing to the mountain-top.

An excursion which had been planned for William Howitt's birthday after he had passed his eightieth year was reluctantly abandoned because of the rain. A year or two later his wife wrote:

"Father and I have just come in from a pleasant walk right in to the country, amongst picturesque houses and such ancient orchards and park-like fields scattered over with grand Spanish chestnuts."

Mr. Howitt died in 1879, aged 84. For a few years more his faithful footmate took quiet strolls, and gathered the flowers her husband loved. And when she had lived to see 89 years she gently fell asleep.

WHERE DEW COMES FROM.

Moisture of the Ground Condensed by Contact with the Cool Air.

Ground, a little below the surface, is always warmer than the air over it. So long as the surface of the ground is above the dew point, vapor must rise and pass from the earth into the air.

The moist air so formed will mingle with the air above it and its moisture will be condensed, forming dew wherever it comes in contact with a surface cooled below the dew point. In fact, dew rises from the ground.

Place some metal trays over the grass, the soil and the road on dewy nights. You will generally find more moisture on the grass inside the trays than outside; you will always observe a deposit of dew inside the trays, even when there is none outside at all. This shows that far more vapor rises out of the ground during the night than condenses as dew on the grass and other objects.

Dew, then, rises from the ground. But how is the dew formed on bodies high up in the air?

Dew does not rise in particles, as it was once considered, to fall in particles like fine rain. It rises in vapor. Some is caught by what is on the surface of the earth, but the rest ascends in vapor form until it comes in contact with a much colder surface, to condense it into moisture.

The vapor does not flow upward in a uniform stream, but is mixed in the air by eddies and wind currents, and carried to bodies far from where it rose. In fact, dew may be deposited, even though the country for many miles around all be dry and incapable of yielding any vapor. In such cases the supply of vapor to form that dew would depend on the evaporation of the dew and on what was wafted over by the winds.—N. Y. Journal.

Man in Very Ancient Times.

The most remarkable feature in connection with the recent discoveries in Babylonia of records antedating all others by thousands of years is the fact that so far as yet appears from these latest data men were then much as they are now, and lived then somewhat as they live to-day. On one tablet a jeweler gave a guarantee that an emerald set in a ring would not fall out for 20 years; on another a couple of farmers agree to refer the question of their boundary line to a third party for arbitration, and also agree that he is to ask nothing for his services. A third bears record of the adjustment of a claim for wages, and so on, the life then being apparently, with proper allowances for different circumstances, a close approximation of the

WILD WEST SCENES.

Episodes Indicating Element of Danger Has Been Exaggerated.

It was midnight as a thundering knock came at the door of room 48, Phoenix hotel, says the New York Sun.

"What is wanted?" asked the occupant, as he sat up in bed with furiously beating heart.

"We want you! Open this door!" "Never!"

"Then take the consequences." The man sprang out of bed and hurriedly dressed himself. His face was pale and his hands trembled, but he shut his lips with a determination to sell his life dearly. He heard footsteps moving in the hall, and presently his door was burst from its hinges and a dozen men burst into the room. They found him standing with a revolver in each hand and the light of battle in his eyes.

"You may hang me," he said, in a low, tense voice, "but 12 of you will go into the other world before me."

"Who said anything about hanging?" inquired a voice.

"But you have come for that. Twelve years ago in this town I killed four men. You have recognized me, and have come for revenge."

"Not much, stranger. We don't know anything about the four men, and don't want to. You live in Missouri, don't you?"

"I do."

"Well, what we wanted to ask was whether three of a kind beat a straight in your state."

"They do not."

"Then that's all, and you can go back to your swamp. Sorry to have disturbed you, but we had a dispute, and wanted to settle it."

For 50 miles pursued and pursued had kept at about the same distance as they flew over the trackless prairie. Now and then one had gained or lost, but the race had become one of endurance instead of speed. At last, an hour before sunset, the face of the pursued began to lose its hopeful expression as he felt his horse giving way under him. He pressed home the cruel spurs, and the beaten animal, scarcely warmed with new life, but only for a few minutes.

"I am doomed!" he exclaimed, in despairing accents, as his faithful horse staggered again.

From behind him came fendish yells of rejoicing.

Another mile, and the horse of the pursued sank down in his tracks, and his rider stood with folded arms and a defiant look on his face to wait the other's coming.

"So I've got you!" said the pursuer, as he rode up and dismounted.

"You have."

"You know me to be the sheriff of Cold Chuck?"

"I do."

"And that I never let a man escape this town, as you rode through our town I shouted to you."

"Yes, you recognized me as Dandy Jim, the road agent, but I hoped to outrun you."

"I did nothing of the kind. I asked you for a claw of tobacco, and you was so durned mean about it that I've followed you 50 miles to show you what sort of a man I am. Do you chaw?"

"Of course I do."

"And will you give me a chaw?"

"With the greatest of pleasure. As my horse is dead I do not see how I can go back with you."

"No one wants you."

"But didn't you follow on to arrest me?"

"Not by a blamed sight. I followed on to make you hand over that claw I asked for, and you jest let this be a warning to you. Next time you ride through Cold Chuck and I yell for a chaw you want to come right down with half a plug."

All at once two men each armed with two guns leaped into the middle of the street and began firing at each other. Pop! bang! pop! The street was cleared of pedestrians, and men looked from behind shelter with bated breath. Six shots, ten, 15, 20.

"Are they both dead?" was asked in whispers.

"Pop! bang! pop!"

"But they must be dead now."

Fifty shots, 100, 200. Then a man who had been asleep in a distant saloon slowly awoke and shambled out doors and down the street. When he reached the fighters, the four guns were still blazing, but he closed in and took both men by the ear and led the pair around the corner and gave them the boot and said:

"How many times have I got to warn you that it's again the ordinance to shoot off firecrackers?"

—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 16.—

Judge Jas. E. Cantrell is announced as a candidate for United States Senator in 1903.

The Republican newspapers are still threatening Senator Black burn with a contest.

Gov-Elect Sanford, of Alabama, is critically ill and may not live to take the oath of office.

Maybe Yerkes, who went up Salt river last week, had something to do with the rise in salt.

The Gifford house burned at Poplar Bluffs, Mo., and five lives were lost in the holocaust.

Bryan's majority in Kentucky is about 8,000 and Heckham's will not fall below 4,000. It is small, but it will do.

Hon. Jas. B. McCreary's boom for senator has already been launched and he will be one of the most formidable contestants for Deboe's seat.

President McKinley has invited all of his Cabinet ministers to serve again. This is doubtless done to head off the numerous cabinet boomlets being started all over the country.

The salt trust has run up the price of salt on the eve of big killing from $1.10 a hundred to $2.50. As the trust controls 95 per cent of the salt output of the country, there is nothing for the consumer to do but stand and deliver.

Now if you Republican fellows who have been maintaining "strained relations" with us all the fall will come around, we will agree to drop politics for awhile and talk about something else. We will even go so far as to send you the KENTUCKIAN for $2 a year.

The President is now at work on his message to congress and among other things he will advocate a small reduction in war taxes. Since the war for which they were levied has been over two years, the people are beginning to wonder why all of the war taxes are not stopped.

The State Election Board has not yet filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of Morton K. Yonts. The Commissioners will meet Dec. 3 to canvass the State returns and the formal inauguration ceremonies will transpire Dec. 11, when Gov-Elect Beckham will take the oath of office for the term ending Dec. 1903.

It is an unpleasant commentary on the intelligence of the average voter that after ten years of experience with the secret ballot, nearly 300 out of the 8,000 voters in Christian county were unable to stamp their ballots according to law. Nearly 150 absolutely destroyed their ballots, while almost as many more marked, mutilated and defaced them with blots and blurs that made the officers, Democrats and Republicans alike, hold them to be void and meaningless. The Republicans of course suffered most from this lack of intelligence, for the reason that the average Republican is intellectually inferior to the average Democrat in Christian county.

Republican frauds are coming to light in Louisville as the count progresses. In many precincts where there were Republican clerks a ballot is found to be missing and Democrats are convinced that the Republicans worked the "chain system" to handle the purchasable voters. This way to defraud is worked by tearing two ballots out of the book and handing them to a voter. The voter stamps one of the ballots and returns it to the clerk; the other ballot he folds up and carries outside to the worker in waiting, who stamps it with a stencil in his possession and gives it to the next voter, whose vote has been purchased. This voter, as an evidence of good faith, is required to bring back the blank ballot handed him by the clerk, casting as his vote the ballot given him on the outside. In this way the chain is worked from the time the polls open until they close.

The official call for the election of Democratic precinct committees is published to-day. In the precinct mass meetings to be held next Monday at one o'clock for this purpose, Democrats of all shades of opinion are invited to participate. There can be no ring rule in a party organized upon a basis of this sort. Turn out, Democrats, and select your leaders for the next four years.

"New Brooms Sweep Clean."

The human body has been compared to a temple and the poet urges us to keep it entire and clean. To accomplish this end, every nook and cranny must be swept and garnished. SOUTHERN NEGROES

To Leave For Honolulu To Work On the Big Sugar Plantations.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 13.—A large colony of Southern negroes will leave in a few weeks for Honolulu to work on the big sugar plantations there. The owners of sugar plantations and mills in Honolulu are short of men and have written to this section frequently a letter with regard to securing a large delegation of Southern laborers. F. A. Montague and J. T. Manson, who have been working in the interest of the race, have secured contracts to transport ten thousand negroes to the sugar country and are now at work forming the colony. The negroes are to receive free transportation and lucrative work after landing at Honolulu. So far the project is meeting with success, and it looks as if several thousand negroes will make the trip. Monday twenty-five white men from Nashville and New Orleans left for Honolulu to work in sugar mills.

BADLY HURT

But Now On The Road To Recovery.

Mr. Isaac Mann, of near Hambridge, who was badly hurt in a runaway two weeks ago, is now on the road to recovery and will soon be out again. When he was thrown from the wagon the wheels passed over his body and it was feared that he had been internally injured, but this proved not to be the case. He was very badly shocked and bruised and cut about the body but no bones were broken.

A very large audience was present last night at the Columbia to see the initial performance of the Peruchich-Beldini company.

Manager Peruchich as probably the best company he has ever brought to Atlanta. The dramatic portion of the show is adequate while the specialties are decidedly the best ever seen here at a popular priced entertainment. Chelso Peruchich's acrobatic work was splendid. The Carleton sisters whose names did not appear on the bills, delighted the audience with their singing and dancing. The Pickett family deserve all the nice things that have been said about them. Their work has the added charm of novelty.—Atlanta Journal.

There is nothing so bad for a cough as coughing. It tears the tender membrane of the throat and lungs, and the wounds thus made attract the germs of consumption. Stop your cough by using the family remedy that has been curing coughs and colds of every kind for over sixty years. You can't afford to be without it.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Loosens the grasp of your cough. The congestion of the throat and lungs is removed; all inflammation is subdued; and the cough drops away.

Three sizes: the one dollar size is the cheapest to keep on hand; the 50c. size for coughs you have had for some time; the 25c. size for an ordinary cold.

"For 15 years I had a very bad cough. The doctor and everybody else thought I had a real case of consumption. Then I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it only took a bottle and a half to cure me." F. MARION MILLER, Camden, N. Y.

PRECINCT COMMITTEEMEN.

Democrats Outside of First and Second Class Cities To Hold Meeting Monday.

On Monday next at 1 p. m. Democrats of the State, outside the cities of the first and second classes, will meet to select precinct committeemen. The purpose is to reorganize the Democratic party in the State in accordance with the rules laid down by the State convention. The people are to control the party organization under this plan, the State Central Committee no longer being empowered to select the precinct committeemen. The cities of the first and second class are Lexington, Louisville, Covington, and Newport.

Voters at other points will do well to remember that if they wish to take a hand in the reorganization of the party they should participate in these precinct meetings. The precinct committeemen are selected for a term of four years, and they compose the County Committees. One committeeman will be selected from each precinct. Following their election the precinct committeemen meet and organize the County Committee on a given date, electing a chairman and a secretary. In this manner the party organization is left entirely with the people, but in case the Democrats of any precinct fail to elect a precinct committeeman at the time stated power is given the State Central Committee to appoint one.

"POETRY AND PEARLS."

All Taylor the Next of the Lecture Course Stars.

During the season of 1899-1900, Hon. Alf Taylor delivered his lecture entitled "Poetry and Pearls" in about seventy-five cities and towns of the South and Southwest, and its success was so instantaneous and universal as to place him at once among the foremost American platform entertainers. Calls for the repetition of this lecture have been so numerous that Mr. Taylor has decided to present it during the season of 1900-1901.

"Poetry and Pearls" is more than a mere speech. It is a beautiful prose poem, sparkling with metaphor and allegory and simile, and effervescent with wit and humor. Opera House, Nov. 27.

"From beginning to end the lecture abounds with beautiful language."—Nashville American.

"Poetry and Pearls" is visibly the successful effort of a master mind."—Nashville Banner.

"Mr. Taylor came as near, perhaps, to describing the beauties of woman and love as any man ever will."—Chattanooga News.

"The oration, was one of the finest ever heard from the rostrum."—Richmond (Va.) Dispatch.

MAJ. JAS. B. GARNETT

Becomes A Benedict At Cadiz—Miss Mary Gunn The Bride.

A notable wedding occurred in the pleasant little town of Cadiz at nine o'clock a. m. Wednesday the 14th inst.

The contracting parties were Maj. Jas. B. Garnett and Miss Mary Gunn. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mrs. W. L. Dunn, Rev. Hayes, of the Methodist church officiating.

The marriage is the culmination of an extended courtship and the happy couple received the congratulations of many friends. The wedding was a quiet affair, attended by only a limited number of the intimate friends and relatives of the bride and groom. Maj. and Mrs. Garnett left at once for Gracery, where they took the I. C. train at noon for a bridal tour to New Orleans and other Southern cities. They will return in about three weeks and be at home at Mr. W. L. Dunn's, in Cadiz.

Maj. Garnett is one of the ablest lawyers in Kentucky and has been prominent in his profession and in politics for twenty-five years. For eighteen years he was Commonwealth's Attorney of the third judicial district and made a record as a prosecutor that attracted attention all over the State and stamped him as a criminal lawyer with few equals anywhere. Since his retirement from office he has enjoyed a large and lucrative practice, being located at Cadiz.

He has been regarded as "congressional timber" of the highest class and last summer was for a short while a candidate for Governor, but when he found that the canvass would take him away from Cerulean Springs, where the future Mrs. Garnett was spending the summer, he suddenly decided that he did not care to run for Governor.

Maj. Garnett is in the prime of a vigorous and robust manhood, being in the fifties. He has been a widower for many years. His career as a lawyer has been very successful, bringing him not only fame but fortune. He is rated as one of the wealthiest men of his county and his popularity is unbounded. He is one of the gold Democratic leaders who stand in the party and as a consequence he has a firm hold upon the good opinion of all classes of Democrats, and commands the respect of all regardless of party affiliation.

His bride is a sister of Mr. Thos. W. Gunn, former proprietor of Cerulean Springs, and is a most estimable representative of one of the best families of Trigg county. She is every way worthy to be the wife of her distinguished husband. The good wishes of a host of friends are extended to the fortunate pair.
